In recent times, Russian strategy has been to bolster these sectors to reclaim its status as a global superpower, which was lost following the Cold War. To better understand how Russia plans to reclaim its superpower title, it's worth individually exploring how Russia is solidifying its position on all four fronts.

Russia's view of the modern world, as well as its goals and objectives are reflected in the Foreign Policy Concept adopted in 2016. It evaluates the global situation and analyses the processes unfolding in the world and its regions. On its basis the foreign strategy of the country has been found in full recognition of the fundamentally new state of strategic instability; an accident or mishap could set off a cataclysm. Not since the 1962 Cuban missile crisis has the risk of a U.S.-Russian confrontation involving the use of nuclear weapons been as high as it is today. Yet unlike during the Cold War, both sides seem willfully blind to the peril.
